Abstract

In spite of having the capacity to control pain, more scientific refinement of modern medicine is needed to become more useful. This article delineates the different aspects of the modern medicine and the limitations associated with it, and also how to overcome these limitations by following the energy treatment based on eastern medical wisdoms. Although, modern medicine is still needed in emergency surgery, corrective surgery, repair of congenital defects, etc., modern medicine cannot be abandoned. Also, this article explains about the possibilities of other useful systems of medical practice that could contribute to a future integrated system that works with quantum physics as the base.
